Jochen Fornasier, born 1968 in Bochum, Germany, studied Classical Archaeology, Ancient History, and Prehistory at the Westphalian Wilhelms-University in Münster. After his doctorate (1999), he led archaeological excavations on the Taman'-Peninsula (Southern Russia) in a cooperation project between the University of Münster and the Institute for the History of Material Culture in St. Petersburg. From 2000 to 2004 he worked in the Eurasian Department of the German Archaeological Institute in Berlin and led the German-Russian excavation project in the Greek colony Tanais near the modern city Rostov-on-Don. In 2007 he was habilitated with a work on the Greek colonization of the Black Sea area at the Martin-Luther-University Halle / Wittenberg. Since 2009, Jochen Fornasier is working at the Goethe University Frankfurt / Main, where he has been appointed an extraordinary professor in 2014. His recent scientific studies include studies on Greek colonization, ancient religious beliefs and ancient mythology. Since 2014, together with Alla Buyskikh, he leads the German-Ukrainian interdisciplinary cooperation project in the ancient Greek colony of Olbia Pontike on the Ukrainian Black Sea coast, mainly funded by the German Research Foundation.
